

4 FRENCH TRAITORS SHOT AT VINCENNES

Three Men and a Woman Faced Firing Squad for Betrayal of Compatriots.

By LAURENCE HILLS.
Staff Correspondent of THE SUN AND NEW YORK HERALD.
PARIS, May 15.—Traditional French superstition has been aroused as a result of the execution this morning of four French traitors who were convicted of having delivered Frenchmen into the hands of the enemy while living in the occupied territories during the war. A court-martial last July condemned eleven persons, men and women, to face firing squads, but Presidential clemency reduced the sentence of seven of the convicted persons to life imprisonment in the penal colony.

At daybreak this morning in the ditch surrounding Fort Vincennes three men and a woman faced firing squads and groups of public officials. For the first time in history newspaper reporters were admitted to the fort to witness the executions.
As the commander of one of the firing squads gave the command "Present arms!" Georges Togue, the youngest of the condemned men and formerly a French soldier, cried out his innocence, declaring that he never had betrayed a Frenchman and never had touched German money.
All four of the condemned were shot simultaneously. Although Togue's body was riddled with bullets, he cried, "Vive la France!" as an officer stepped up to his prostrate body to administer the coup de grace.
The horrified spectators stood aghast when Togue seemed to show signs of life, and the officer was recalled and fired another bullet into the man's brain.

It was said to have been the first time in French military history when a firing squad failed to kill a man at the first volley.
Soldiers and civilians alike, remembering Togue's constant professions of innocence during his trial, now are credulous over the strange occurrence at Vincennes to-day and are asking whether Providence, at the last moment, proclaimed the injustice of the execution.
Mme. Aubert, whose ugliness won her the title of "the ogress," faced the rifles stoically and with eyes unbanded. Just before she fell she called out to the attending nuns and priests:
"It's all the same to me! I am going to heaven!"
It was proved in the trial that Mme. Aubert carried on an extensive intrigue with the German invaders, which caused her to make many trips between France and Switzerland.

SALVADOR REBEL CAPTURED.

Caught by Hondurans Trying to Enter Guatemala.

SAN SALVADOR, May 15.—Arturo Araujo, leader of the band of Salvadoran revolutionists who recently crossed the frontier from Honduras and who were driven back into that country by Government troops, has been captured at Las Medas by Honduran forces under Gen. Arguello, according to advices received to-day. The rebel leader was endeavoring to enter Guatemalan territory when taken. He will be removed to Tegucigalpa. Senor Araujo was the candidate of the Liberal party for the Presidency of the republic in 1919.

RED CROSS DEEDS IN LACE.

PARIS, May 15.—To Hugh C. Wallace, American Ambassador, has been presented an elaborate piece of lace into which is woven the story of the American Red Cross during its recognition of Mr. Wallace's efforts. The lace was presented by the Soldiers' Aid Society of Argentina, a suburb of Paris. It was made by thirty pupils of Argentina's lace making school. They spent two months on the piece, which contains twenty-four designs, each illustrating some place where the Red Cross worked.
